Over The Last Week
As of December 4, 2020

Quick Take

-  The long-term model remains very favorable. The yield curve continues to steepen, which has historically been a tailwind for equities.
-  The intermediate-term model slightly improved during the past week. This was mostly related to our quantified measure of economic news on the U.S. economy, which displayed a significant shift from negative to positive.
-  The main concern we are currently observing from our model continues to be investor sentiment, which we view on a contrarian basis. While not at an optimistic extreme yet, every sentiment factor we track is currently showing optimism and detracting from the score of the intermediate-term model.

A Closer Look at Our Tactical Positioning Targets

Each day, Meeder analyzes and ranks over 70 different factors from our short, intermediate, and long-term models. The dynamic statistical model incorporates factors covering macroeconomic, fundamental, trends and technical analysis to estimate the potential reward and marketplace risk of the equity markets. The Meeder Spectrum, Muirfield, Balanced, Moderate Allocation, and Conservative Allocation funds utilize this strategy for the Defensive Equity portion of their portfolios. The Defensive Equity Strategy guides the allocation of each fund's equity sleeve and the actual proportion of equity investments in any fund will vary depending on the investment objectives of the fund.

Understanding the Defensive Equity Snapshot

The vertical axis of the grid combines the scores of our long-, intermediate-, and short-term models to arrive at the reward value for the stock market. The horizontal axis represents the model's internal measure of stock market risk. The reward value is divided by marketplace risk to arrive at our recommended percentage of Net Equity Exposure.
